HE HAS ENOUGH.

Gen. Aguinaldo, it is Reported, is Anxious for Cessation of Hostilities.

Our Troops at Malolos Were Sent Out on Reconnoitering Duty-Found Insurgents Only in Small Force iu Surrounding Country.

WASHINGTON, April 3.-It is reported here on seeming good authority that Aguinaldo has sent trusted friends to treat with the American commissioners for a cessation of hostilities. The statement is also made that he wants more liberal terms than those laid down in the recent proclamation of the commission, but there is no disposition on the part of the Americans to modify them. They demand that the rebels shall immediately lay down their arms, come into camp and give up the struggle until some sort of a government can be provided for the

WASHINGTON, April 3 .-- This dispatch from Gen. Otis was received Saturday morning:

MANILA, April 3 .- Gen. MacArthur took dinner Friday night and slept in the hall of the Filipino congress. The troops are worn out and are resting. It is planned to keep them in camp at Malolos for several days before following up the Filipinos.

The death of Lieut. Gregg, of the 4th infantry, who was killed near the Manila waterworks Friday, has deeply affected the army as he was one of the most popular young officers. His uneral took place Saturday.

MANILA, 'April 3. - The American troops under Gen. MacArthur are still resting at Malolos, where everything has been quiet Sunday. Hostilities elsewhere, so far as officially reported, have been limited during the last 24 hours to an occasional exchange of shots between the insurgents and the troops forming the lines of Gen. Lawon and Gen. Hall, extending from the water works to La Lonia. But this shooting has been just active enough to make the lives of the soldiers a burden and to compel the officers to sleep in trenches, clothed and in readiness to resist possible attacks. Most of the Americans are becoming convinced that the backbone of the insurgent opposition is broken. There are numerous rumors pointing to an early collapse of the insurrection. One of these is that Gen. Pio Del Pilar, the best fighter among the Filipino officers, will drowned by the sinking of the Stella. desert Aguinaldo and give his support to the Americans.

Time alone will show how much there is in this theory; but as against it, it must be borne in mind that the Spaniards in all their domination of the Philippines never gave the inhabitants a demonstration of power comparable in effectiveness to that given them by the United States.

London, April 1.-The steamer Stella, with tourists for the islands of Jersey and Guernsey, struck on the Casquets, a few miles off the French coast, and sank in eight minutes Thursday

There were 176 passengers on board, only 102 of whom are reported saved. Capt. Reeks went down with the ship.

When the vessel struck the Casquets the people aboard became greatly excited. The officers of the ship, aided by a few cool heads, made their way among the frightened excursionists and checked a threatened panic. The people were crowded into small boats as fast as possible, the women and chiliren taking precedence.

There was not time to distribute life preservers to all the passengers. Some of these did not wait for the boats, but jumped into the water. Several of them were picked up clinging to pieces of wreckage. The rescued passengers are unanimous in their praise of the con duct of the crew.

According to latest reports from the scene of the sinking of the tourist steamer Stella, on the Casquets, the steamer Lynx saved 41 persons and the Vera 61. It is estimated that 75 of the passengers and crew are still miss

There is a great crowd about the office of the London & Southampton Railroad Co., clamoring for news from friends and relatives who were on board the steamer Stella, which was wrecked on the Casquet rocks Thursday. The Stella was steaming at the rate of 20 knots when she struck. six of the ship's boats were lowered at once. One of these capsized and one has not been heard from. Four of the boats, full of women and children, got away safely.

Capt. Reeks gave orders from the bridge, which he refused to leave. The crew and the men remaining on board crowded to the rail as boat loads of women and children took to the water, and, as they disappeared in the fog, followed them with a ringing cheer. The Stella keeled heavily and the sea ran up along the decks. The captain

Their People, Productions, Commercial and Strategic Importance.

Have a Population of 36,000 People, of Whom 200 Are British Subjects, 125 Germans, 25 Americans, and 50 Other Nationalities.

WASHINGTON, April 3.-The people, productions, commercial and strategic importance of the Samoan islands are discussed in the publication just issued by the treasury bureau of statistics. The islands lie in an almost direct line between San Francisco and Australia, and slightly south of the direct steamship line connecting the Philippines with the proposed Panama or Nicaraguan inter-oceanic canals. Their special importance, therefore, it is stated, lies more in their position as coaling and repair stations on these great highways of commerce rather than in their direct commercial value, their population being small and their imports und exports of comparatively little impor-

The group consists of ten inhabited and two uninhabited islands with an area of 1,700 square miles and an aggregate population, according to latest estimates, of 36,000 people, of which something over 200 are British subjects, 125 Germans, 25 Americans, 25 French and 25 of other nationalities, while the remainder are natives of the Polynesian race. The bulk of the population is located in the three islands of Upolu, Savii and Tutuila; the number in Upolu being 16,600, in Savii 12,500 and in Tutuila, which contains the harbor of Pago Pago, ceded to the United States in 1873 for a naval and coaling station, 3,700. HAVANA, April 3 .- The island government, as administered by the United States military authorities, has yielded for the first quarter $3,500,000 as customs receipts. An Evidence of Prosperity.

It is generally conceded by economists, who study the commercial situation of the country, that the great arteries of railway travel are a sure indication of its condition. A depression in commercial lines means abandoned business trips and the cancellation of pleasure travel, while a healthy condition of affairs means business trips and an increase of passengers on pleasure bent. A good evidence that a business revival has gone broadcast over this country is the "Lake Shore Limited," the star train of the Vanderbilt system, between New York and Chicago, which is daily comfortably filled. With a view to taking the best possible care of its patrons, the New York Central has arranged to increase the equipment of this train by placing an additional standard sleeper on the trains leaving New York and Chicago Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. To the regular traveler the appointments and comforts of this train are well known, but if you have never made a trip the fare is no higher on this train, except between New York and Chicago, while the accommodations and service place this particular train conspicuously at the head of the list, when compared with other lines.-Albany Journal.

SMITHERS' RETORT.

He Makes a Tart Reply to the Landlady at the Private Family Boarding House.

Mr. Smithers is a somewhat fastidious young man who is looking for a new boarding place. Smithers can't abide the regulation boarding house, and always tries to live with a private family. He is now convinced that an "ad." which solicits boarders for a "nice private family" is often a snare for a stuffy double flat, inhabited by one small family and 24 boarders.

Smithers called one day last week at a place with a glowing description just on the flank of Michigan avenue's aristocracy. "Hum, suspiciously like a boarding house," thought Smithers, as he took in the dimensions. A collarless negro servant who opened the door confirmed his suspicions, but he had gone too far then to back out. A sharp-nosed, snippy landlady came in with a top-lofty air.

"Er-ah, I believe I am mistaken," he began. "I supposed I should find a private family. CHAPTER I.

OF MY RECOMING A SEAFARING MAN. I was born in the days of the Lord Protector, so that I was a little past my majority when the things that I have in mind to relate took place. My father was a sea captain, out of Portsmouth for the Mediterranean, and was killed by the Barbary pirates and his ship taken a little time before I came of age. My mother grieved sorely for him, and only survived his loss a few months, and my two young brothers being then put out with a reputable haberdasher, and the little that remained of our fortune turned over to him for their benefit, I found myself of a sudden alone in the world, and brought, for the first time, to depend upon myself for a living. I had made a few voyages with my father, and had come to be something of a seaman, though I knew scarce anything of navigation, and this knowledge, with what I gained from an ordinary round of schooling, stood for all I was now to reckon on to make my way in the world. While I was reflecting on my condition, and casting about to see what I should do-for I did not relish the idea of using the sea, though that was now often in my mind-I chanced to fall in with a certain shipmaster, Daniel Houthwick by name, to whom, after a short acquaintance, I disclosed my ease, and asked his advice. We were seated in the taproom of one of the little dock inns at the time, with a pot of old October before us and no one just by. The captain took a pull at his mug, which made his hairy throat give a great throb, and after a little deliberation answered:

"I should be blithe to help you, Master Ardick, could I but get my bearings to see how. You know I am an old salt water, with little run of things ashore, I might come at something by broad reckoning, but no better."

"Give me that," said I, eagerly. "Anything is better than beating about all ways in the wind."

"Then how say you," he began, "to taking up with the sea? I will not deny that it is a hard life, and I mistrust you do not incline to it, yet I think there be worse callings. Moreover, your father followed it, and I conceive you must have been born with some natural fitness for it. These things do not out of the blood in one generation. Have you, then, so much salt water in your veins as will overbear the objections?'

I hung in the wind a little, for this was the very thing I would not have, yet I was slow to refuse. At last I answered:

"I have indeed salt water in my veins, which is to say I like the sea, yet I have a scruple concerning a sailor's life, and thus far have not learned sufficient to overcome it."

He regarded me with attention while I was speaking, and when I had made an end smiled and was silent for a moment.

"It is as I guessed," he then went on to answer. "Well, and I am willing to concede you three parts right. Yet how if he had addressed joined him. The there offered some opportunity for ad- | supercargo, for such, of course, the secvancement-I mean without waiting ond man was, I found to be a nimble. half a lifetime?"

"Why, in that case," I answered, not quite sure what he would be at, "the matter would stand in another light." "Look you," he said, rounding upon me then and speaking in a brisker tone than he had before, "I have a mind to make you a proposition. I am in want of a second mate. So we can agree upon terms, what say you to the place? It is a little better beginning than a bare berth before the mast, with the chance of betterment."

I could see the thing closing in upon me, as it were, yet hardly knew how to evade it, and, on the whole, began to care less to do so. "Well, captain," I ing a man of considerable parts, and of finally answered. "I cannot see why I a family above the ordinary, my father should decline such a kindly and timely offer. I agree, providing that I am able to fulfill all your requirements, which I somewhat doubt, seeing that my ex perience has been but brief."

He called for the score, which he insisted upon paying, and we left the inn. There was a good deal of confusion along the docks, for several of the king's ships were fitting for sea, and the running about and pulling and hauling, all without much method or precision, were suprising and perplexing, but at last we reached the jetty where the captain's boat was lying. On the way it suddenly occurred to me that I had neglected to ask a pretty important question, which was the port that the Industry—the captain's ship—was bound for. I asked it now, and learned that it was Havana, in the West Indies. This suited me very well, as I had never been in those parts, and had a young fellow's tain was out of the way, though the fondness for novelty. We boarded the gig, which a middle-aged sailor was keeping, and were soon clear of the tangle of shipping about the docks, and standing into the roadstead. chief features. She stood pretty well out of the water (considering that she was loaded), and, while she had a good beam, was not overround in the bows, and was well and loftily sparred. She was painted black, with a gilded streak, and showed no break for ports, which, indeed, was not surprising, as few merchantmen at that time carried their guns otherwise than on deck. All her tops seemed to be provided with shields, or barricadoes, and on the poop and along the bulwarks I could resolve the outlines of several sakers and swivels. Besides these she might carry some heavy piece, and, in fact, I caught a glimpse, through an open gang-port of a shape in a tarpaulin which could hardly be other than a long-range gun. The whole appeared to show that she was fitted to fight as well as to fly, which was passing needful in those troublesome times. Her burthen (as l afterward learned) was 350 tons, and as we approached her, and she flashed up her great black side, she looked even larger. As we drew near, some heads showed above the bulwark, and I made out a ladder hanging over at that place. We pulled up to it, and when we rose on the next wave the sailor reached out a boat-hook and steadied us to it, and we were speedily up the side.

As I glanced about, taking in the fashion of the deck and such arrangements as had not been visible from the water, a short, broad man, in a kind of Dutch blouse and heavy sea boots, came from some place forward and accosted the captain. I inferred that he must be the mate, and so indeed, it proved, and upon being presented I found his name was Giles Sellinger, and that he hailed from Southampton. He had a resolute, honest-looking countenance, albeit the smallpox had pitted him rather severely, and I thought had the air of a good seaman and competent officer. The captain explained the meaning of my being aboard, and said that he doubted not I should suit them well, though it might be I should halt in some things at the beginning. Master Sellinger received this explanation in a way favorable to my pride.

We made no further delay, but returned to the town, and at the hour appointed to be fetched off I was ready, clothes-bag in hand. The tide had fallen since morning, and I had to walk to the edge of the jetty before I could espy the boat, which I then perceived at the foot of the long flight of wet steps. The two sailors, who were the crew, were alone in her, and so I saw that I was beforehand with my companions. I waited a few moments, talking with the sailors (but not too freely, lest they conceive me an easy sort, which would not do), and presently I heard the voice of the captain. The sailors pushed the boat more fairly to the foot of the stairs, and directly the captain appeared at the top.

"Aye, Master Ardick is here," I heard him say back to some one behind him. and almost with the words the person erect little gentleman, in age perhaps 60, with some gray in his beard, but a good fresh skin, and dressed very handsomely in sad-colored velvet, lowcrowned hat with feathers, yellow hose, and high-heeled French shoes, with blue rosettes. His head was covered with a fashionable flowing wig, and his broad sword-belt supported a good substantial sword with a silver hilt.

As soon as Capt. Houthwick had put us on our course he presented me to the supercargo, giving his name as Mr. Tym, and informing him with some little pride that he would find me other than the common sort of sailor, behaving been an owning shipmaster and the son of a justice of the peace, and my mother the daughter of a knight.

After a somewhat tedious pull, the wind being in part contrary and quite a sea beginning to run, we drew near, and I got up and made ready to seize the ladder. It was of rope, with wooden and presently I succeeded in catching it, and drew the bow of the boat as near as was safe. The ship rose and sank and churned about in a troublesome fashion, but I managed to hold on, and first the captain and then Mr. Tym passed me and swung over to the ladder. The old supercargo was as steady and sure-feoted as a rope-dancer, and it immediately occurred to me that he might be a veteran seagoer, a conclusion which was confirmed as I saw how coolly he waited on the ladder till the capship was rolling and pitching and sending frothing flings of water up to the very soles of his dainty shoes. In a moment the captain had passed over the low, and it was then that I made a surprising discovery. I had noticed that the old fellow had kept his cloak partly about him, and I had marveled at it. "Aye, quite right," he answered, point- as the day was so warm, but now, as he garment and blew it out, and behold, There was a dazzle on the water in he had lost his left hand! The sleeve that direction, and I could not get so hung loose and long about the wrist,

This lively breeze was a fair Mr. Tym shortly retired again to the one for our sails, and we must all needs cabin, and the hard weltering of the look alive, and walk up the anchor and ship through the heavy seas went on. get the Industry under canvas.

The captain mounted the poop, a man was sent to the tiller, and the mate stationed himself just abaft the forecastle to pass the word along.

"Heave her short!" shouted the captain. "Heave her short!" repeated the mate, and the pawls of the windlass began to rattle.

"Loosen sail!" followed, and the men sprang into the rigging. Everything was cleared to let go, and all hands, except a man on each yard to stay the bunt, scampered back to the deck.

"All ready aloft?" hailed the mate. "All ready!" answered the fellows on the yards.

"Let go!" and the ship flashed out white, and stood clothed in the waves of loose canvas. Then the chief topsails were set, the yards trimmed, and the anchor finally brought to a head. She steadied quickly to her work, and as she climbed away the light canvas was rapidly put out.

In a short time the watches were appointed, and the business of putting the ship in order and other like things of the beginning of a voyage attended to, and after that I had a little breathing space deck. the forecastle, and then went again on deck, where I found the wind rather gathering strength and quite a stiff sea running. We reefed the topsails, and by that time supper was called. The rest of the evening passed without ineident. I turned in early, as my watch was to be called at eight bells, and, when the time came, crawled out mighty sleepy, but full of zeal, and so kept my four hours. At daylight all hands had to be called, as there was a heavy wind, which was verging on half a gale, and we whipped down the mainsail and the great lateen, and before we were done had to be satisfied with a reefed main topsail, a bit of foresail. and a reefed sprit-topsail.

"Marry, but this is something boisterous for the narrow seas," said a high-pitched voice behind me, as I stood holding on by the lashings of the big gun and watching the turmoil.

I turned and saw the little supercargo, who had just come out of the cabin. He was balancing himself fearlessly on his straddled legs, a long seacoat whipping about him, and his hand clapped upon his hat to keep both that and his great curly wig from blowing

"Aye. sir," I said, "this is rough weather for the channel."

"I saw worse once!" he shouted, with a kind of chuckle, and then immediate-

"And how was that?" I asked, willing to forget the weather for a moment if I could.

"Why, it was a matter of above 20 years ago," he replied. "Things so fell out with me on that occasion that I put to sea on a day even worse than this in only a small fishing sloop."

"It was beyond account rash," commented. "It must have been strait, indeed, to bring you to it."

"It was to save my neck," he answered, speaking this time close to my amount of money spent on lotions, ear, that he might talk with less strain. "You see, it was in the days of old Noll, and I had ventured into my native Sussex-I had forgotten to say that the old tyrant had set a price on my head-and was forced to get speedily out. Luckily, a fellow-royalist was at hand and lent me a horse, and on that I reached the seaside and thence rungs, the top and bottom made fast, I boarded this fisherman, upon which I put out, as I said."

> "But the master of her," I queried, a little puzzled by that point in the story, "how did you prevail on him to take such a risk?"

"Yes," he answered, shaking his head, "and at last we had to cut away the mast. It is too long to dwell upon, but the wind-up was we finally made France. It was hard by Calais, and we had started from Eastbourne. There was much tedious pumping to do, and right slow progress under such sail as we could put upon a jury-mast, was nothing surprising or unexpected, of course, here in the channel, and I gave no more heed to it at the time. The forenoon wore away, and it was about seven bells when, happening to think of the sail I had seen, I went to the rail to look for it. It was now about on the lee bow, and much nearer, and soon I could make out a large ship close hauled on the starboard tack. continued to watch her, and presently I saw that she had altered her course and was now steaming directly toward us. I happened to glance toward the poop where the captain and mate were standing, and saw that the skipper was pulling out and pointing his glass. He took a long observation, and then, to my surprise, shook his head energetically and passed the glass to the mate. Sellinger looked in turn, and almost at once lowered the instrument and began bawling something in the captain's ear. Houthwick answered by a nod, and turned sharply and ran a little way aft. He gave a command-I could not tell what-to the man at the helm, and rapidly returned and descended the poop ladder. The mate followed, stopping at the bottom to hang the glass in some beckets, and came to the confines of the quarterturned short at the companion, which side took out his trumpet. He made no stop, but scurried out to the ladder strides, the pace faster than I had ever yet at the top when the mate roared to me, using his hand to guide the

One Can Never Be Pleasant to Look Upon Unless in Good Health -Means to That End.

The most helpful and agreeable bath is that of tepid water. Few people can stand absolutely cold baths, and no matter how strong one may be such a bath should not be indulged in unless a thorough rubbing be taken afterward. To speak plainly, it must be remembered that while a cold bath may be more or less invigorating it is not cleansing. I can easily understand the desire of every woman to have a clear beautiful skin, but I confess to being provoked when I think of the creams and powders to be applied externally, and which have nothing like as good an effect upon the skin as tepid bath with good soap taken at least once a week. The condition of the skin depends almost entirely upon the care given to the general health. The girl who is up late at night, gives no care to her diet, indulges in various stimulants, bathes but seldom, and exercises less, is certain to have either a dull, muddy-looking skin or one covered with disagreeable-looking black and red spots. One should avoid many sweets and much pastry, and not allow herself to become a slave either to tea or coffee any more than she would to some vicious drug or strong stimulant. "And the crew? Had you no trouble | She should also remember that unless she is in good condition internally, she will be anything but a pleasant object to look upon externally.-Ruth Ashmore, in Ladies' Home Journal.

THE FIRST BARY.

Its Coming is Looked Forward to With Both Joy and Fear and its Safe Arrival is Hailed With Pride and Delight by All.

The arrival of the first baby in the household is happiest and most important event of married life. The young when the little one shall nestle upon her breast and latterly she shall hear it lisp the sweet and hely name, "mother." But her happy anticipation quickly vanishes when she realizes the terrible pain and suffering through which she must pass while bringing the little one into the world. An indescribable fear of the danger attendant upon the ordeal soon dissipates her joyfulness.

Thousands of women have learned by experience that there is absolutely no necessity for the sufferings which at-tend child-birth; they know that by the use of "Mother's Friend"—a scientific liniment-for a few weeks before the trying hour, expectant mothers can so prepare themselves for the final hour that the pain and suffering of the dreaded event are entirely obviousd and it is safely passed through with comparatively little discomfort.

All women are interested, and especially expectant mothers who for the first time have to undergo this trial, in such a remedy; for they know the pain ger, which is in store for them. "Mother's Friend" is woman's greatest blessing, for it takes her safely through the severest ordeal of her life. Every woman should be glad to read the little book "Before Baby is Born," which contains information of great value to all. It will be sent free to any one who sends their address to The Bradfield Regulater Co., Atlanta, Ga.

It is on this pinciple that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery increases the quantity and qulity of the nutrition of the body. The predicate of this medieine are selecte to furnish the blood and stomach with the essential materials for body building in a concentrated and assimilable form. They make the conditions under wich the stomach and organs of digestin and nutrition must work, as easy as pssible, and so reduce strain and waste. #### MEMORY'S PICTURE.

Ye children of the mountains, sing of your craggy peaks. Your valleys, forest-girdled, your cliffs where Echo speaks; And ye, who by the prairies your childish joys have seen, Sing of your waving grasses, your rolling miles of green. But, when my memory wanders down to ward the dear old home,

I hear, amid my dreaming, the seething of the foam. The wet wind through the pine-trees, the gurgling splash and roar, The solemn surge and thunder of the surf

I see, upon the sand-dunes, the beach-grass sway and swing. see the screaming seagulls skim by or graceful wing, see the silver breakers tossed high on shoal and bar, And hear the bell-buoy tolling his lonely note, afar:

The green tide-meadows bring me their salty, sweet perfume, I hear, through miles of dimness, the watchful foghorn boom; Once more, against the blackness of Night's great roof-tree high,

The wild geese chant their marches athwart the arching sky. The dear old cape; I love it! I love its hills of sand. The sea-winds singing o'er it, the seaweed on its strand-The broad, blue ocean round it, the bright, blue sky 'o'erhead, fisher-boats, the dripping nets, the white sails filled and spread For each heart has its picture, and each its own home song, The sights and sounds that move it when childhood's memories throng.

And when, in fancy's dreamland, a boy live once more I hear the mighty music of the surf along the shore. -Joe Lincoln, in L. A. W. Bulletin.

THEY were on their way up the Mississippi river-the mother, Fannie and the twins. I throw in the younger children in a bunch, as it were, because it takes too long to say Sue and Lou. They were spoken of as twins by everyone, and everyone knew them.

Fannie was not a marrying girl, and she used to say that no one but herself realized how much in the way of relief she owed to those blessed twins. The suitors also were wont to bless the twins, but in a somewhat different

One of these suitors was on the boat that day, and he and Fannie, "cribbed and confined," as it were, in one corner of a deserted quarter of the deck; the twins were out of range for once, and he thought he was making good head-

But really in her heart Fannie was despising him for a fop; his immaculate clothes came first, she thought; his viands next, probably; and, lastly, with what little was left of him, his character.

That particular day he walked up his avenue of approach, undisturbed by bark of dog or remark of twin. He was nearer the delectable mountains than ever before, he realized, and his heart thumped madly against his irreproachable waistcoat as he opened his mouth to ask the decisive question.

Just at that moment a shrill scream pierced the sultry July air. Then a harrying and scurrying of feet was heard. Instantly a ray of knowledge flashed its way into Fannie's brain. "One of the twins is overboard!" she said to herself, as she sped down the near stairs and along the lower deck.

Just as she reached the bow of the boat she saw a little skirt drawn in nurse-everything! by the suction of the water between the barge (on which most of the excursionists were embarked) and the boat that drew it. Another moment still scraggy, but Lou had blossomed and the same little skirt, and a child's into a lovely, rounded-out, softlyface half hidden in her long, wet hair, | tinted girl-and some one had discovwas borne by the swift waters out and ered this (as men will) and made love down the river.

Again it rose-if and why he left them .- Credited to only he could get there in time! But what seemed to the watchers a waste of waters separated him from that little floating frock.

The captain had his field glass out now, and he silently passed it around. Spider was nearing the child, but before he could reach her she sank for the last time. Down he went, and I think that hardly a breath was drawn until he rose-without her!

He was having a hard fight to get ashore; evidently he was badly spent. They could understand then why he gave up his search. He was obliged to get to shore or to abandon himself as well as the child.

The passengers had felt angry with him-especially those who had done least-for turning back alone, but when they realized his condition they became anxious lest the swift current should claim him, too.

Slowly he worked his way along until he neared the shore, then a strong hand laid hold of him, for the dude had waded out up to his neck and was bringing the exhausted swimmer in. Two or three other men laid hold when help himself.

"What a pity he had to turn back,"

Sure enough, there, held betwixt his knees with a deathlike grip, was a lit tle figure shrouded in wet calico and long wet hair.

There was nothing equal to the enduring quality of those twins; you couldn't kill one of them. That day, even before Spider came to himself. Lou was on her feet again, walking back to the boat, escorted by an immense bodyguard of rejoicing people.

The next thing on the programme was to reward Spider. As he wouldn't touch a cent of money, that was a difficult matter. HINTS FOR THE TOTLET.

With one accord the passengers- | some Valuable Suggestions for the the Care of the Hands and the Hair.

> Women with pretty hands usually take better care of them than those that are not so blessed. However, most any woman can escape having attention drawn to the fact that her hands are not especially beautiful by taking care of them and making them as presentable as possible. In the first place, in order to make them limber-a word. you know, that is the first cousin to grace-the fingers should be exercised every day by doubling them up to a fist, then opening them, and stretching them out as far as possible. Repeat this movement one hundred timescounting three each time the fingers change position.

At night the hands should be soaked in very warm soap suds, made from pure castile or olive oil soap. After he got to shore and helped drag him this they should be carefully dried, usout of the water-he was powerless to ling almond meal or oatmeal to render them velvety. Then they should be rubbed very thoroughly with lanoline, This can be bought in bulk at the drug stores in whatever quantity is desired; or it can be bought in preparationwhich is a better way to use it. Lanoline is pronounced by physicians to be a pure and excellent skin food. After this is rubbed in the hands should be inserted in a loose pair of kid gloves over night. In the morning wash carefully and dry with almond meal. Of course it is not necessary to rub in the lanoline every night of one's life. After the hands are once put in condition, it is not difficult to keep them so.

The skin about the nails should be pressed well back, using a dull instrument that will not cut nor irritate it. The crescent at the bottom of the nail gauges the distance at which the skin should be pressed back, as this should always be in sight.

The difficulty usually lies not so much in the fact that she cannot help herself, but that she neglects to do so. This is a deplorable mistake, as nothing adds so much to a woman's beauty as a lovely coiffure; in fact some women almost gain a reputation for being beautiful solely because of it.

Home-Made Fairy Lamps.

The effect of the jeweled fairy lamp, which is so admired in cozy corners, may very easily be obtained by an adjustable globe covering. This requires a ball-shaped globe, and the best color is white for a background. The jewels are set in a net very much like the beaded nets for the hair. The meshes of the net are about an inch in diameter, however, and the jewels are of cut glass like those set in the metal fairy lamps. This net easily adjusts itself to any shape of globe, so that it appears to be a part of the globe itself. The cord of which it is made is either white or silver or gold covered, the latter being much richer, especially when stretched over a red or green globe. The best imitation of the fairy lamp at home is made with an electric drop other is for the baked beans train. Return this creamy mixture to the eggs and skewer together with wooden toothpicks if desired for the luncheon-box. If a relish for tuce leaves. This makes a specially pretty dish for a yellow luncheon .- N.

Kipling's Good Luck.

The first story that Kipling writes after his illness will bring a fabulous price. It will be sought as eagerly by progressive publishers as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is by all who suffer from stomach ills of any nature. No matter whether it be indigestion, constipation, biliousness, nervousness, stubborn liver or overworked kidneys, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure it. It is an unequaled spring medicine, curing and preventing malaria, fever and ague, and all ills resulting from a run-down system.
